GRAHAM'S POINTER.

How a Murderer Was Acquitted Near Springfield, Mo.

By Telegraph to THE SENTINEL.

SPRINGFIELD, Mo., March 4.— Details have just been received of a tragedy in Taney county, in which Nat. N. Kinney shot and killed Andrew J. Cogburn, at Oak Grove church, last Sunday evening. Kinney and his boy, Payne, rode up to the school-house where Rev. Dennison was holding a meeting, and commanded Cogburn, who was standing near the door, to throw up his hands. Meeting a refusal, he shot him down, killing him at once. An inquest was held and Kinney was acquitted. There were several of Kinney's friends at the inquest, heavily armed, and Kinney himself carried a shot gun and revolver, although under arrest.

VIENNA, Ill., March 4.—Frank McIntosh, a farmer, was shot and killed, last night, through a hole in his log cabin by an unknown person.

EMMA'S APPEAL

To George Graham for a Square Deal.

By Telegaph to THE SENTINEL.

SPRINGFIELD, March 4.—Outside of the burial of Mrs. Graham there are no new points in the tragedy to note to-day.

MRS. MOLLOY AND CORA LEE.

George Graham has brought before the people in a new role Mrs. Emma Molloy, the red ribbon temperance lecturer, and her friend, Cora Lee. Colonel Wells, of Grand Rapids, has known these two ladies for years and gives the following sketch of them to the Democrat: "Mrs. Molloy was the wife of Edward Molloy, formerly editor of a democratic paper at South Bend, Ind., and now editor of a paper at LaPorte. She was assistant editor and became interested in temperance and took to the rostrum as a red ribbon lecturer. She traveled all over this country and addressed large audiences in Europe. Three years ago she went to Indian Territory and recently removed to Missouri. Cora Lee was in her employ as a nurse and companion. She was raised in LaPorte and is twenty-three years old, was the daughter of a poor widow lady. Her mother married again and she was thrown on a cold, uncharitable world. She accompanied Mrs. Molloy to the Indian Territory and has been with her ever since. She is quite prepossessing in appearance, rather tall, fine form, gray eyes, heavy dark eye lashes, fair complexion and pleasant face. She had a most excellent disposition, confiding, perhaps too much with those inclined to be friendly toward her. Graham was Mrs. Molloy's advance agent while she continued in the lecture field, and married Cora Lee last fall. Cora knew nothing of his first wife, who was then living, until she saw in a Saint Louis paper, in December, that a wife and son of Graham were missed by their friends in the east. The boy, who is twelve years old, wrote his aunt that she need not write any more letters to his mother, because his father had sent her so far away from home that she would never be heard from again."

A letter was presented to George Graham, yesterday, by Mrs. Molloy, but was not given out for publication until last evening. It is generally regarded here as an ingeniously worded appeal for quarter. Graham has given it no attentention and is still busily engaged in fixing dates and coupling facts for his coming historical statement, which will be one of the most lengthy and interesting chapters ever given to the public. The following is the letter.

SPRINGFIELD, Mo., March 2, 1886.

My Poor Boy:

This is probably the very last letter I shall ever be permitted to pen you. I am committed with Cora, as an accessory to that terrible murder, of which you know I am as innocent as a child unborn. In all the flood of misrepresentation and malice that has been so unjustly heaped upon me, I have not yet opened my mouth in my own defense, because the excitement over Sarah's murder is so intense that I have feared mob vioience, not only for you, but for Cora and myself. Reason and judgment will yet prevail. We are not to be tried by the newspapers, but by the courts, and I expect to be tried by that higher tribunal, the judgement bar of God. All that you can say will not alter God's verdict when we are all put in His scales and stand before Him in the judgment. I do not write this to deter you from saying anything that, before God, you think you ought to say, for the good of the world or the cause of Christ, but be careful that in your hot haste to avenge a supposed wrong, you do not do as grave and terrible wrong to me as you did to poor Sarah, and then wish through all eternity you had done full justice by one who has never shown you a solitary injustice or wilfully done you a wrong. You have never had any thing but kindness from me, from the first hour that you came to me, a poor, sorrowful outcast, and in the tenderness of the religion (in which no one knows better than you I am sincere, and have lived out in all my associations with you). I cared for you as my own, you know how unselfishly. Now, all the newspapers are trying, by sensational reports, to confirm the charge that I helped to plan the murder, and am equally guilty with you. People who seem to care more for sensation than for an innocent human life, are imposing upon you and deceiving you by falsehoods about my utterance and about Judge Baker, and trying to close your mouth by mob violence. I think this chapter of horrors would be complete were you to be hung in the same town where I am. I have for this reason refused to speak a word in my own defense thus far, and Judge Baker only wants to see justice done, and the right vindicated and is emphatically opposed to mob violence. No one on our side has any desire to persecute you, terribly as we have suffered in the attempt to be kind to you. You, in your hot haste, did a wrong to poor Sarah that you can never undo and have put yourself in a position where you may tear down those who are innocent, but you can never build them up. Without the least cause, you may, perhaps, impair the whole work of my life by unguarded and hasty utterances, that can never be recalled. Is this a just reward for the unselfish devotion of years? By our words we shall be justified, by our words we shall be condemned. Remember, in these days you are speaking for eternity. I am simply holding still in God's hands. He will do right by me and I have commended myself to Him. With every prayer for God's help for myself, I have still to cry, "God have mercy upon George," and I pray that He will give you true repentance. If in the fury of this gale I go down, I have commended myself and the dear helpless children under my care, to God. I have only tried to do what good I could, in the last fey years, and if God deems my life work done and it can be possible that I shall stand charged with the grave crime of helping to murder the mother of your innocent babies and the law cannot protect me, I shall say "God's will be done." Don't say anything that you will not be willing to meet at the bar of God, for this life is but a small portion of the life eternal. No one pities you more than the one who has prayed as earnestly for you as any one on earth and now I can only commend you to God's mercy. We shall meet at God's bar. He will do us all full justice.

Yours, in fear of God,

[Signed] EMMA MOLLOY.

Graham's statement will not be forthcoming until the preliminary trial of Mrs. Molloy and Cora Lee.

NEW YORK, March 4.—The steamer Gallia, of the Cunard line, reached her dock in the North River yesterday. Among her passengers was Rt. Rev. Dr. Older, who brought the pallium from Pope Leo to Archbishop Corrigan. He was met at the dock by a clergyman, who escorted him to the archiepiscopal residence.

Archbishop Corrigan is to receive today at the hands of the cardinal-elect, Gibbons, of Baltimore, the pallium insigna of the archiepiscopal authority and dignity and formally installed in the catholic see of New York.

OUR MAJOR GENERALS.

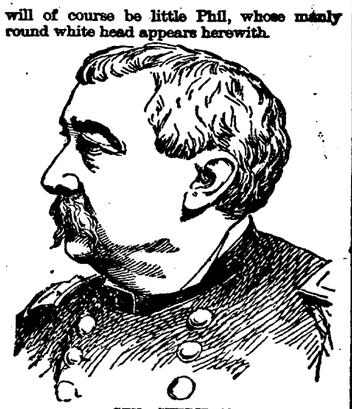
[Special Correspondence.]

CHICAGO, March 3, 1886.—The attention of newspaper reader has been called anew to the generals of our army, since the death of Gen. Hancock. There is a common impression that Phil Sheridan was promoted to the place from which Gen. Sherman retired in 1883, by reason of having reached the age of 62. This is the age at which commissioned officers are to be gently relegated by law to private life.

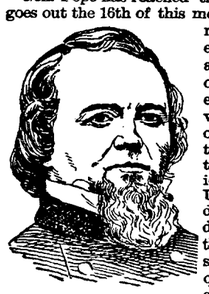
But Sheridan did not take Sherman's place. He is the last, so to speak, of our little army, but his title is that of lieutenant general, and his pay is $11,000 a year.. Sherman was the general of the army, with a pay of $13,500 a year. This title and place were created after the last war. It was really done to provide for Gen. Grant. Gen. Grant's country was always providing for him. He at least could not say that republics were ungrateful. Grant was general of the army till his inauguration as president in 1869. Then the office and title devolved on his friend "Cump." Sherman, who some how never had the knack of getting on with the newspapers. The general's title has lapsed for the present. If anybody gets it anyways soon, it will of course be little Phil, whose manly round white head appears herewith.



GEN. SHERIDAN.

The military question is now who is going to be major general in Hancock's place. The law limits the major generals to three. Their salary is $7,500. Gen. Hancock was so hospitable that he could not live on this pay, and died poor. Since his death there remain of the major generals two, John M. Schofield and John Pope.

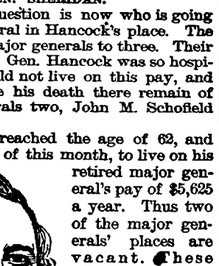
Gen. Pope has reached the age of 62, and goes out the 16th of this month, to live on his retired major general's pay of $5,625 a year. Thus two of the major generals' places are vacant. These officers are each at the head of one of the military divisions into which the United States is divided. Military division No. 1 is that of the Missouri, with headquarters at Chicago. It is commanded by Schofield. No. 2 is the military division of the Atlantic, headquarters New York. This is now without a head. No. 3 is the military division of the Pacific, commanded by Gen. Pope, headquarters San Francisco. Each division includes a number of departments. These are commanded by brigader generals, of which the law allows six, no more. A brigadier general gets a salary of $5,500.



GEN. POPE.

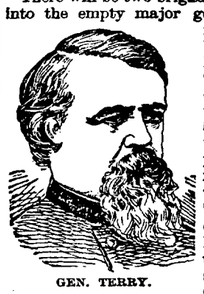
Gen. John Pope graduated at West Point, in 1842. The brainiest men of the West Point students are promoted to the engineer corps. Pope was one of the fortunate. He began his military career as second lieutenant of topographical engineers. He was in the Mexican war, and has seen much solid fighting. Some of his countrymen have a fancy that he is a better engineer than general, but that is neither here nor there.

Practically, therefore, Schofield is the only major-general in the field. His command is the most important in the country, comprising a slice down the middle of it, which takes in about two-thirds. He can go to New York city if he likes, being the senior major general. But he would go from a large department to a small and less important one, simply for the sake of being in New York. John McAllister Schofield was born in New York state, in 1831. He was born the same year Sheridan was, and graduated in the same class at West Point. He was for a while a schoolmaster, though he does not look it. He was professor of physics at West Point, and afterward at Washington university, St. Louis. He got his boom toward distinction at the battle of Franklin, Tenn., in the late war. He was president, or whatever the proper military title corresponding to it is, at West Point for a time.



GEN. SCHOFIELD.

There will be two brigadier generals to step into the empty major general's shoes this month. They will be Gens. Terry and Howard. Gen. Terry is a brother of Rose Terry, the writer. He is now 58 years old, and will only have four years to enjoy his major general's triple stars. Gen. Terry was educated at the Yale Law school, and is the only one of the subjects of this sketch who is not a West Pointer. He is the man who captured Fort Fisher, in 1865. He is in Dakota.



GEN. TERRY.

Brig. Gen. Oliver Otis Howard is at present out in the department of the Platte. He was born in 1830, and graduated at West Point in 1854. He was afterward assistant professor of mathematics there. You would know he was a mathematician by his head. He lost an arm at Fair Oaks in the late war, and commanded the Second corps at Gettysburg. After the war he was detailed to serve as commissioner of the Freedmen's bureau, at Washington. In this connection his name has been mentioned in an unpleasant way, on account of the collapse of the Freedmen's bank, and a rank injustice thereby was done him.

JANET ELMER.

GEN. HOWARD.

A prophet, they say, is no good in his own country; but there is an exception to this proverb. Dr. Bull has been of infinite good to his countrymen, and his cough syrup has become a national balm.

The Dry Dock Line the Scene of a Riot that the Police Could Not Stop.

The Situation at Springfield and News of Labor Troubles Elsewhere.

THE OLD STORY.

The War of Wage Workers Continues.

By Telegraph to THE SENTINEL.

NEW YORK, March 4.—When the dry dock line tried to run a car to-day with the aid of the police, the strikers put a car of the Forty-second street line across the track, dumped a load of coal on the track, ran another car in that and captured all the wagons passing, took the horses away and left the wagons as obstructions.

The police were utterly helpless, and gangs of men continued piling wagons and cars across the track. They upset some cars and wagons, took the wheels off others, dumped coal, and used every means within reach to prevent the use of the track.

BROOKLYN, N. Y., March 4.—Not a car is running on any of the seven roads controlled by the Atlantic avenue railroad company to-day. The strikers are orderly.

SPRINGFIELD, March 4.—The situation to-day is unchanged and the report, current last night, that all Knights of Labor and their sympathizers employed in the knife and car works and the new champion shops were to be discharged, proves a mistake. The managers of those works say they have no intention of taking any such action.

BALTIMORE, Md., March 4.—Several hundred men employed in grading for a short line railroad between Baltimore and Annapolis, have quit work and yesterday three Italians and two negroes made an assault upon some at work. They were arrested.

ST. LOUIS, March 4.—The wire mill on Twenty-first and Papin streets was last night the scene of a conflict between the strikers and non-strikers, that resulted in the injurry of two men, and in the arrest of four strikers who attacked workers on their way home.

DETROIT, Mich., March 4.—Hattie McKay, the eighteen year old daughter of Sheriff McKay, of Tuscola county, was at the Michigan Central depot yesterday on her way to the Jackson prison, having in custody Samuel Woodman, who was sentenced for one year for assaulting his wife with a carving knife. The sheriff is very sick and Hattie has taken upon herself and done so much of his business she decided to take the prisoner. She said she did not handcuff him, but had a revolver in her pocket and kept him in sight all the time.

IN one of his letters to his sister, just published, Benjamin Disraeli wrote, anent a party at Bulwer's: "I was introduced, 'by particular desire,' to Mrs. Wyndham Lewis, a pretty little woman, a flirt and a rattle; indeed, gifted with a volubility I should think unequaled, and of which I can convey no idea. She told me that she 'liked silent, melancholy men.' I answered 'that I had no doubt of it!'" And yet, in a few years, Mrs. Lewis and Mr. Disraeli "were married and lived happily ever after," as the story-books say.

"Never despair" is the motto adopted by thousands who have been relieved of their pains by St. Jacobs Oil.

The Galveston Times has been removed to Logansport, where it will hereafter be published.

The commissioners of Cass county ordered an election in April to determine whether the county shall purchase the gravel roads in the county and make them free.

The grain buyers of Logansport have entered into a combination on prices and pay from five to eight cents less per bushel for grain than dealers in the surrounding small towns. Logansport offers an excellent field for a grain dealer who has the pluck and capital to fight a combination.

A company has been organized in Logansport to sink a well for the purpose of determining whether natural gas is to be found in that region. There have been indications to the presence of the article, and enough stock has been subscribed to sink a well 1,000 feet, and if necessary, 2,000 feet.

A petition is being circulated in Wabash and Miami counties for the pardon of Ezra Roberts, who was sent, one year ago, to the northern prison for stealing cattle in Miami county. An argument will be made soon before the governor by Hon. H, H. Shiveley, of Wabash, for the release of Roberts.

Just two months ago John Dickell was killed by the cars at the Lake Shore depot in Elkhart. His son William, came on from Pennsylvania to attend the funeral. After the obsequies he went to work for the same company. He was run over yesterday at Waterloo while turning a switch, and instantly killed.

The following city ticket has been put in the field by the republicans of Wabash: Mayor, Clarence W. Stephenson; clerk, Howe McGuire; treasurer, Ben Kendall; marshal, Hall Ellis; assessor, John Cochrane. Councilmen—First ward, John H. Dicken; Second ward, Thomas W. McClure; Third ward, Andrew J. Ross.

The chief of police at Lafayette ordered the closing of their largest rink on account of the many crimes said to be traceable to it. A sixteen-year old daughter of respectable parents was found, after being missed a week, in a room on Main street, where she had been decoyed from the rink by six young men. She owes her downfall to attendance at this place of amusement.

The working year with the contractors at the prison north begins March 1, when a number of changes are usually made in the free working force and other matterst. But few changes were made this year in the working force, and but a small difference in contract work was reported. In several of the shops an increase in the task of the men was made, which, as usual, met with some opposition from the convicts.

The supreme court yesterday decided another of the telephone cases, affirming the decision of the Marion county criminal court in convicting Superintendent Hockett for charging Wm. K. Thompson the $5 rental for the use of a telephone. The case in all its features is practically the same as the Haughey case, which was decided two weeks ago, and the decision which is given by Judge Niblack, is based upon the former opinion.

Grand Regent John N. Runyan, is his annual address to the delegates of the Grand Council Royal Arcanum, on the the state of the order, said: "At the close of last year we had twenty-six councils, with a total membership of 931. We now have twenty-nine councils with a total membership of 1,058, showing a gain of three councils and 127 members in the jurisdiction as the result of one year's work, except partially organized councils at Rochester, Columbia City, Auburn and other points where deputies are now at work, but not yet ready to institute."

M. LIEGEOLES, professor at the faculty of law at Nancy, an enthusiastic experimentist, has just invented what he calls l'hypnotisme telephonique. He sends people to sleep several miles distant from him by transmitting to them by telephone the order to go to sleep; he then, by telephone, suggests to them the acts he wishes them to commit, and his orders are faithfully obeyed. One young man was told to fire a revolver and steal a 5 franc piece; on waking up he committed both offenses. A young girl who was sent to sleep by the telephonic order was told to sneeze twice on waking up and to sing a song; she did both.

A MOST remarkable case of restoration of eyesight is reported from Liverpool. Mr. Louis B. Goodman, of that city, for a period of two years has been absolutely blind. A large number of London specialists had, after examining the eyes, pronounced the case hopeless. Lately, however, Mr. Goodman was brought under the treatment of a Manchester oculist, and after eleven weeks' residence in the St. John's Royal Eye Hospital in that city has recovered sight. The doctors, on professional grounds, refuse to give any exact information as to the remedies adopted, but Mr. Goodman says that during the first few days he was in the hospital he was placed under the influence of chloroform, but of what then occurred he has only the faint knowledge of a large accumulation of matter having been removed from his head. After this the patient was put under general treatment, and from the first fortnight began to gradually regain his sight. After being in the hospital for five or six weeks, such strides had he made toward recovery, and so high were his spirits, that on being visited one day by a friend he was found amusing himself by jumping over the forms in the room. He remained in St. John's Hospital for eleven weeks, and left, having the sight in both eyes. He is now in the Convalescent Home in Southport, in almost complete possession of both eyes, having abandoned spectacles.

SECRETARY WHITNEY has sent a letter to the chairman of the senate committee of the New York legislature investigating the Broadway street railroad case, in which he explains his connection with the matter, and says if he is in any respect open to just criticism he is not aware of it. NOVA SCOTIA is the only place under the British flag where imprisonment for debt is allowed and practiced. In any other of the Canadian provinces a creditor can sue a debtor that resides in Nova Scotia, but a Nova Scotian creditor can not return the compliment. The manifest unjustness of this law receives occasional spasmodic agitation, but the objectionable law still exists.

JUSTICE FIELD tells how his pride had a fall. When he was a young man he was particularly proud of his erect form and fine, curling hair. Walking one day with head well up he ran against a cart and injured his knee. The injury resulted in permanent lameness and a consequent stoop in his shoulders. Afterward hard study produced brain fever, and a fly blister cured the fever and destroyed his waving locks.

MR. BONNER'S Maud S., as an admirer tells, stands in her box as modestly as if she was not the wonder of the world. Her disposition, too, unlike most fast horses, is perfect. When her glossy neck is stroked she rubs her pretty face against your sleeve and acknowledges the attention with gratitude.

MR. BUCK, the Kentuckian sent as Minister to Peru, has stirred the fashionable circle of Lima to its center by appearing at a state official dinner in a business suit. Mr. Buck honestly states in his own defense that he had not in his wardrobe such a thing as a swallow-tail, so some of the Americans have formed a syndicate to supply him with an evening dress suit. The Right Hon. W. E. Forster, of England, committed a similar gaucherie at a dinner in his honor given at the Union League Club, New York.

MR. HENRY M. STANLEY, the African explorer, relates that when he started on his tour through the "Dark Continent," he took in his baggage a large collection of books. But as the number of his men was lessened, the books had one by one to be left by the wayside, until finally, when less than 300 miles from the Atlantic, he had left only the Bible, Shakespeare, Carlyle's "Sartor Resartus," Norie's Navigation, and the Nautical Almanac. At Zinga the Shakespeare was abandoned, and afterward Norie, the Almanac, and last, "Sartor Resartus" were thrown down, only the Bible going through to the end.

PREMIER GLADSTONE has at last made a definite statement concerning the policy which he would like to pursue with regard to Ireland. The proposition which he puts forward may be briefly stated as follows: He would empower the landlords to sell lands to the tenants on a twelve years' valuation, the state advancing money to the tenants to pay for the land, and the local authorities of the counties being held responsible for the repayment to the state of the sums thus advanced, the payments to be effected by a series of yearly installments. He would also establish a parliament at Dublin, with power to control all the internal affairs of Ireland, including the police. These conclusions are not final, but merely "feelers," the dispatches add.

CUTHBERT BULLITT JONES, of Louisiana, who, a few weeks ago, so roundly denounced Representative J. Floyd King, of the Pelican State, seems bent on having somebody's blood, is now turning his attention to Senator Gibson. Jones accuses Gibson with "having conspired with King to defeat him (Jones) in his efforts to get an appointment, and that, since King has been shown up in such bad light, he is trying to unload him. When the Jones-King quarrel was pending last November a Washington correspondent wrote as follows of Jones:

"The life of Cuthbert Jones reads like a romance. His father was a rich Kentuckian, who went to Louisiana early in life, and there married more riches in the person of one of the wealthiest and most beautiful daughters of that State. He engaged in planting, and before the war broke out he owned hundreds of slaves and thousands of acres of rich cotton lands. He became one of the grandees of the State, and was widely known as a high-toned gentleman. Near him, however, there lived another wealthy planter named Liddell, who was also rich, and who for years was Mr. Jones' close friend. Mr. Liddell married a well-educated Yankee girl who had gone South to teach as a governess. Time went on, and both Jones and Liddell begat families. Then a jealousy sprung up in some way between the ladies of the families, and, as a well-posted Louisianian tells me, one day when Mr. Cuthbert Jones' father went to call upon his friend, Gen. Liddell, he was met at the gate by one of Liddell's daughters, and struck across the face with a riding-whip. The girl then shot at him with a little pocket-pistol, but failed to seriously hurt him. Out of this striking sprung the Jones-Liddell vendetta, which has existed for years between the two families, which has caused more than twenty-five deaths, and which has about wiped out the masculine portion of both families. The two fathers both died by the bullet long ago. The young man who now wants General King's blood was riding down the Mississippi in a steamboat with his father, when the boat stopped at General Liddell's plantation. General Liddell came on board, and was killed by his enemy, Mr. Jones. The boy, however, had nothing to do with this shooting, though he was with his father at the time. He was only fifteen years old, and had not killed a Liddell. Shortly after this killing on the steamboat a party of the Liddell family came to the Jones house and surprised them. They shot the old man, and his boy escaped by hanging outside of a third-story window with his hands to the sill. His enemies searched the house for him, but did not notice his fingers, and after they were gone he climbed in, and a few days after fled the country to escape them. He went to Europe and spent his school days in Heidelberg. He was finely educated there, and he now speaks six languages as well as he does the English. He has never been back to Louisiana, and he has for some time been living in Washington. The trouble with 'General' King grows out of a scurrilous remark which King uttered about Mr. Jones' mother, which King afterward denied but failed to substantiate the denial."

PURIFY YOUR BLOOD.

Among spring preparations, do not neglect that which is most important of all—your own body. During the winter the blood absorbs many impurities, which, if not expelled, are liable to break out in scrofula or other disease. The best spring medicine Hood's Sarsaparilla. It expels every impurity from the blood, and gives strength to every function of the body. Sold by all druggists.

I think Ely's Cream Balm is the best remedy for catarrh I ever saw. I never took anything that relieved me so quickly and I have not felt so well for a long time. I used to be troubled with severe headaches two or three times a week, but since using the balm have only had one and that was very light compared with the former ones.—A. J. Alcorn, agent U. P. I find Ely's Cream Balm good for catarrh of long standing.—M. N. Lasley, 1934 West Chestnut St., Louisville.

DR. A. C. HOXSIE'S CERTAIN CROUP CURE.—This preparation, a private and original prescription, was extensively used in an unlimited practice for many years, with perfect success by the late A. C. Hoxsie, M. D., of Buffalo, N. Y. Having thoroughly tested and tried this remedy, he had no hesitation in pronouncing it positive, swift and sure to cure Croup in its most aggravated form, when administerd promptly and according to directions. Its powerful and direct effect upon the diseased mucous membrane, render it particularly invaluable to those living at a distance from a physician—as it is seldom necessary to call in professional aid, if the "Certain Croup Cure" is near at hand. While powerful and effectual, it contains no opium in any form, nor any drug which can have a deleterious or injurious effect upon the system. The most delicate infant may take it, as directed, with perfect safty. Price $1.00. For sale by all first-class druggists, wholesale and retail. dec28-eodaw3m

HORSEFLESH AS FOOD.

We have not come to it in this country, but in France old horses are fattened and killed for their meat, just as we kill and eat cows and sheep that are growing past the profitable age. One good result of this is that horses, as soon as they are past their prime, become objects of petting and careful feeding, instead of being sent adrift to starve to death or fall into brutal hands.

Reformers and Corsets.

From the Baltimore American, Sept. 20, 1885.

The dress reformers and those who advocate the abolition of the corsets as an article of women's apparel will be dismayed at the enormous increase in the manufacture and sale of corsets. There are now no less than ten or twelve large establishments in the United States devoted exclusively to the manufacture of corsets of the better quality. Their capital aggregates millions of money, and of the manufacturers of the cheaper grade of goods there is seemingly no end. The Thomson Glove-Fitting corset, manufactured by Thomson, Langdon & Co., of New York, which is sold by all first-class dealers in the United States, is gaining in popular favor each season, and at the present time the orders are far in advance of the supply. Whether or not corsets are injurious to health will continue to be a vexed question with theorists until the Goddess of Fashion decrees their abolition. Meanwhile, any article which adds to the beauty and comfort of the female form will continue in favor until the goddess is dethroned. Messrs. Thomson, Langdon & Co., recognize this fact, and they make more than thirteen different styles of Thomson's Glove Fitting, two of which are with extra long waists, in order that every demand of comfort and beauty may be met. Competent judges have pronounced them superior to all others, and they have obtained the highest awards at all the world's great fairs and expibitions. The latest honor is the First Degree of Merit at the New Orleans Exposition. 1t

Distress After Eating,

the result of indigestion, will no longer be experienced if a half tablespoonful of Simmons Liver Regulator is taken after each meal. It is such a good digester, and so mild and pleasant in its effects, that it is used by many after a hearty meal to ensure good digestion. The Regulator does not nauseate or irritate the stomach, is purely vegetable, and can be taken in any condition of the system, and, unlike any other known medicine, when it's use is discontinued, the system is not left constipated.

WOMEN.

A Budget of Interesting Gossip Relating to the Tender Sex.

SILENCE CAPTURED THE CAKE.

Julian Hawthorne on Woman's Rights—A Kentucky Belle on Love-Making—Popping the Question.

Silence Takes the Cake.

There were three maidens who loved a King;
They sat together beside the sea.
One cried: "I love him, and I would die
If but for a day he might love me."

The second whispered: "And I would die
To gladden his heart or make him great."
The third one spoke not, but gazed afar
With dreamy eyes that were sad as fate.

The King he loved the first for a day.
The second his life with fond love blessed;
And yet the woman who never spoke
Was the one of the three who loved him best.

She Knew It!

"Doctor! I'm worried about my husband! Do you think him seriously ill?"

"To the best of my judgment, madam, he is suffering from gastritis."

"I knew it. I told him his trouble was from fooling with that gas meter yesterday."—Yonkers Gazette.

Rather Early.

She: "This is a pretty hour of the night for you to come home after promising me to be home at a quarter of twelve. You are the biggest liar in Austin."

He: (Pointing to the clock.) "Well, ain't three a quarter of twelve? It ain't my fault that you don't know arithmetic."—Texas Siftings.

Not Much of a Kicker.

"I understand the old man doesn't want you to come to see his daughter," said one young fellow to another.

"That's the state of the case, but I went all the same."

"No!"

"Yes. Was there last night."

"Did he kick?"

"Some."

"Much?"

"Well, no, not a great deal," was the hesitating reply; "that is, not as much as he might have done. He only kicked me from the parlor to the front door, and I went the balance of the way by myself."—Exchange.

Julian Hawthorne on Woman's Rights.

In his latest novel Julian Hawthorne has this paragraph: "Could that dreary slavery called Woman's Rights ever be put into operation the world would soon become too business-like to think of love and marriage. Woman is the conservative of the human race; she is the centripetal, as man is the centrifugal force. If she did not stay at home and mind her own affairs, home would cease to exist. Man, in that case, would do well to exterminate the female half of creation off the earth, as merely a feebler and frailer imitation of himself, and then die with the consoling consciousness of having done one good deed. Nothing is more certain, however, than that women are not and never will be such fools as some few of themselves, and quite as many forlorn nondescripts of our own sex, would like to persuade them that they are."

Popping the Question.

A lady correspondent gives the following instructive hints on the all-important subject of popping the question: "Never propose to a girl who has been out driving the day or evening before with another man. Women have not the versatility of men and cannot as readily turn from one subject to another. Never propose to a woman who has recently rejected some one else. Woman is naturally sympathetic, and in refusing proffered love she instinctively, almost unconsciously, devotes herself to a life of celibacy. She should be carefully watched until the reaction takes place, and then she becomes even better prepared than before to lend attention to a declaration. If she has been engaged and the relation has been dissolved, the lover may even be a little careless in the selection of his time. To a girl once engaged an engagement becomes a necessity, and she is prepared at almost any moment to listen favorably to an advantageous proposition. To propose to a girl in her own home in the afternoon is madness, and if the excursion fails the inevitable deduction is that for such a girl the evening is the only time that promises any possibility of success. It is a work of supererogation to dwell on evening declarations. Every man understands them, and he has only to make the most cursory examination as to the health of the subject before entrusting his ambition to words.—Exchange.

A Kentucky Belle on Love-Making.

In the classic language of Mr. George W. Simpson, from the interior of Kentucky, the man had "been thar" who "writ" these lines:

"Tis sweet to love, but oh, how bitter,
To love a gal and then not git her.

As the poet touchingly insinuates, says the Louisville Commercial, the sensation of being thoroughly in love is the sweetest emotion that moves the human breast. Love rules the nation. Love is the joy of all creation. But love unrequited has the sting of a million deaths. Love leads to death, to misery, to crime, and to suicide. Nearly every weak-minded man who loves and don't "git her" becomes a self-assassin. Men of stronger mind suffer for a while, and then, as a rule, look for another girl and make the best of experience.

But the glamour is gone and the sentiment is no longer the main-spring. Method takes its place, for he who loves the second time loves with a system. It is the first love that moves to ecstatic bliss or reduces life to a stainless blank, as the girl always puts it when she writes by her window at midnight with the moonbeams streaming in to remind her of a blissful love stroll in the June time long ago. But according to the professed belief of a noted belle of this city who is now a round and rosy matron with children at her knee, the poet's dreadful contingent need never bring misery to a lover's heart. In other words the man who loves in the right way can "get her."

"A score of men made love to me," said the excellent lady above referred to, "and any one of them might have had me if he had studied the art of love-making with the same care he would give any time to a game of chess.

"I hold that love-making is an art. There is no such thing as love at first sight. We may admire each other in the beginning, but immediate affection is out of the question. First impressions, no matter how favorable, must be strengthened by artful cultivation. Then love comes, and if the man who sues makes no mistake, he is sure to win, no matter what his conditions may be. Of course he must talk well, dress respectably, and, above all, wear clean linen and keep his face free from dirt. If he does all this and sues judiciously no arrow of misfortune can keep the victor's wreath from off his crown. I might add that one of the requisites in personal appearance is clean teeth. A man may have a nose like a pumpkin, or a mouth like a mammoth ham, or a foot as big as a canoe, he can win, but if his teeth are not what a gentleman's teeth ought to be he will rue the day he gave his heart to a well-bred woman. He may be tall or short, stout or lean, with a voice like a fog-horn and a carriage as ungraceful as the amble of a camel, and he may yet win any woman in the world if he studies her with care and keeps his teeth clean.

"I heard a pretty girl from Cleveland say once that she had been devotedly sought by young Mr. L. for four years. She was fond of him and admired him for many excellent qualities, but she finally let him go, because, as she put it, he never had the courage to once squeeze her hand. To my knowledge there was never a purer or better girl than that one, but she was too full of mercury to ever wed a man who lacked the spirit to at least squeeze her hand in a lovable way. Real women, I protest, care nothing for milk-and-water men, nor do they always worship heroes, but, as I have said, if any intelligent man, with clean linen and clean teeth, will make a judicious combination of flattery and ardent devotion he can win any woman in the world who doesn't hate him for a cause in the beginning.

"Let me say just one more word about love-making. This is for girls. A noted French author in one of his books declares that jealous men are always fickle. It is just the other way. Jealous men are never fickle. Jealousy is the surest evidence of true love. When a woman can arouse the demon in a man's bosom, she may always feel sure of him. He loves her and will go on his knees when she bids him."

A LITTLE TALK WITH NED BUNTLINE.

"I was the earliest writer of serial stories in this country," said Col. Judson, better known as "Ned Buntline." "I wrote 'The King of the Seas,' 'The Queen of the Seas,' 'The Black Avenger,' and 'The Red Avenger' in the Boston Flag of the Union, the first serial story paper. In those days they thought $100 was fine pay for 400 pages of manuscript."

"And now?"

"Well, the New York Weekly pays $2,000 to $2,500 for each story, and they run one of mine all the time."

"I have written under many names," continued Col. Judson. "The best known is undoubtedly 'Ned Buntline.' I have written a great many under the name of 'Clew Garnet.' I have also used 'Miss Julia Edwards' a great deal. An army officer fell deeply in love with Julia Edwards, and wrote letters very much desiring my hand in marriage. I answered some of them for a time. He finally wrote that he was coming to Warrenton, Va., where I was staying at that time. I then had to write him telling him his mistake. I suppose he would willingly have killed me.

"I have a library in which I work, and no one comes near me there. I isolate myself from my family and apply myself heartily to my work. Under pressure I have produced 600 pages of foolscap manuscript in six days.

"The first bound work for which I was paid was a Sunday-school book."—Detroit Free Press.

MRS. TOODLES OUTDONE.

In the village cemetery stands a monument of economy which we think has no counterpart in the country. It is a tombstone, the present owner of which purchased it of another who had erected a large monument, and of course the second-hand tombstone went cheap. Having made the singular purchase the present owner, who, by the way, is the female head of the family, proceeded to have the inscription altered so that it would do the duty she intended for it. As the result of her efforts the inscription now reads: "In the memory of C—— B——, wife of R—— B——. We are both here." The very unimportant part which the husband fills in his family, as indicated in this inscription, is only exceeded in its absurdity by the fact that both of the parties the tombstone informs the reader lie there under the sod are alive and promise to be so for many years to come. As an economic, or rather a parsimonious, transaction, this deal in a second-hand tombstone stands up head.—Catskill Mail.

Mr. J. A. Price, deputy inspector of State Tobacco warehouse No. 5, Baltimore, Md., says: One of my children had been suffering with neuralgia for some time. A friend recommended Salvation Oil. I procured a bottle and a few applications, to my surprise, effected a complete cure. I take pleasure in recommending it to all persons similarly affected.

At Indianapolis, Superintendent Wallick, of the Western Union, and a director in the Central Union Telephone company, returned from Chicago yesterday morning. He says that the address issued by the telephone company, which was published in THE SENTINEL yesterday, means exactly what it says—that is, that they will close up their exchanges in this state, where it is unprofitable to maintain them at the legal rates, and this, as indicated, will include all the large exchanges.

Morss, then city editor of THE SENTINEL, asking him to get a pardon from the governor. The writer read that letter and agreed with Mr. Morss that it was a gem.

Never skip the advertisements when reading a newspaper. They show just what live business men are doing, and every one who has trading to do will find it pays to trade with those who advertise. Business men who do not advertise are not up to the spirit of the times, and their stock lingers on their hands. Those who advertise turn their stock quickly, make a fair profit, and always have a fresh stock to select from. This is a fact and not a fiction, as can be demonstrated by every successful business man in the country.

The indications for the lower lake region, as reported by the weather bureau at Washington to THE SENTINEL, are as follows: Fair weather, preceded in eastern eastern portion by light local rains; slightly warmer.

Superintendent Stevens, of the Wabash, eastern division, states that the earnings of this division will show an increase in both January and February, and that by his efforts in behalf of economy he has cut down the operating expenses of this division $10,000 per month, as compared with January and February, 1885.

THE MARCH SKY.

The Heavenly Wonders of the Third Month.

There is promised us an annular eclipse of the sun to-morrow. In Fort Wayne, the eclipse will be noticed about sunset, if the sky is clear. Numerous requests come from young people to make the phenomena later in the eve, but the motives are selfish and THE SENTINEL astronomer cannot consent to a postponement. The sun is a little slow, it will go down about 6 o'clock, less a few moments. The sun is only 91,510,200 from us, and instruments can be fixed for that distance. The moon is now pretty close to Venus and Neptune and an eclipse may be arranged exclusively for spooney people.

A PLEASANT FEAST.

The Banquet to Trustee Gaffney.

The Teachers of Wayne township, who are devoted to Trustee Gaffney, tendered that gentleman a banquet at the Fox parlors last night. Mr. Gaffney made a neat speech, and other gentlemen responded to toasts. The occasion was most pleasant, and a high testimonial to Mr. Gaffney. The ladies and gentlemen present included: Mr. Philley, Mr. Methley, Miss Probasco, Miss Gaffney, Miss Kelsey, Miss Burgess, Mr. Greer and others, teachers, and of invited guests, H. E. Fisher, Judge O'Rourke, Charley Bookwalter, Supt. Feltz, Mr. and Mrs. Chris. To-night Laura Dainty will open in "A Mountain Pink" at the Academy. Miss Dainty is so well known here that no mention of her is necessary, and we only quote for the purpose of showing that the impression she creates abroad is no less favorable than here. The Portland (Ore.,) News says: "No one visiting Portland as a stranger has made so many friends, especially among ladies, as Miss Laura Dainty. She has shown such marked cleverness and exhibited so much real feeling in her acting, and withal has been so natural, that people have unconsciously become her friends."

"MICHAEL STROGOFF,"

The Imperial Messenger of the Czar, Our Guest.

The dramatization of as clever a novel as Jules Verne's "Michael Strogoff," introducing, as it does, a diversity of scene, is not an easy task, but fortunately for the people of Fort Wayne, this novel fell into good hands, and a picturesque realization of it can be seen at the Temple to-night. D'Ennery, the great French play-right, succeeded in following the story closely. and in presenting the more striking of the situations with links enough between to give a clear idea of the story to those who have never read the novel. The motive of the play is in the earnest devotion to duty of Michael Strogoff, of the imperial messengers of the czar, who, given a message to Irkutsk, overcomes all obstacles to fulfill his pledge, "For God, the Czar and My Country." In the cast are such artists as Joseph Slaytor, Clarence Wilkins. Edward Hassen, Cecile Rush, Heaton Monice, Florine Arnold, Charlotta Brianza, Eugene Cappalina and Eliza Carullo. Mr. Charles L. Andrews presents this picturesque drama with forty people, under a special license of J. H. Haverly and Samuel Coville.

CONGRESSMEN—COWHIDES.

A Scene From the Ladies' Reception Room in the Capitol.

[Special Correspondence.]

WASHINGTON, March 1.—The ladies' reception room in the Capitol is always full of interesting and often anxious faces. Women with claims, cares and hopes wait there, stifling their impatience and wearing the look of easy self-satisfaction, when their hearts are as heavy as mountains. They wait, and wait and wait, with a heroic assumption of patience, while the lordly congressmen put them off with forged excuses, or bid the messenger who summons them carry back the word that they can't be found. Sometimes one sees the same faces in this room day after day. As the time goes on and they are still there, with no prospect of having their wants looked after, anxiety and disappointment write cruel lines on their faces. A sight of their repressed misery reminds one forcibly of the unhappiness of those who "wait on princes' favors." Forty ladies are often in this reception room at one time. Each one has an errand of vital importance to her. She can do nothing to hurry matters. She must simply wait, wait, wait! At the last she is probably disappointed. All her time and anxiety have been uselessly spent.

Now and then there is a lively scene in this reception room, and congressmen are sometimes charged with duplicity, and it may be with something worse. During the last session a well-dressed woman with a rather aggressive air appeared at the door of the house opposite this room and attempted to enter. Her face was flushed and her eyes blazed with determination. She was gently pulled back, and it was then discovered that she was carrying a cowhide whip in her hand. She said that a certain congressman had ill-used her, and she was bound to horsewhip him in the presence of the house. The threat of a policeman restrained her.

Since then some of the congressmen cast uneasy glances at the habiliments of their female callers, looking for the concealed cowhide. They feel a little insecure in their minds, anyway, and since the irate woman's call they have picked up somewhat in gallantry. All congressmen have a wholesome fear of the cowhide. It is their natural enemy, far more to be dreaded than the ready revolver. It may be that the cowhide will become the established weapon of defense for women. Thus far its operations seem to have been followed by better results than that time-honored instrument of vengeance, the law. MAX ELTON.

SPRINGFIELD, Mo., March 4.— Details have just been received of a tragedy in Taney county, in which Nat. N. Kinney shot and killed Andrew J. Cogburn, at Oak Grove church, last Sunday evening. Kinney and his boy, Payne, rode up to the school-house where Rev. Dennison was holding a meeting, and commanded Cogburn, who was standing near the door, to throw up his hands. Meeting a refusal, he shot him down, killing him at once. An inquest was held and Kinney was acquitted. There were several of Kinney's friends at the inquest, heavily armed, and Kinney himself carried a shot gun and revolver, although under arrest.

EMMA'S APPEAL

To George Graham for a Square Deal.

By Telegraph to THE SENTINEL.

SPRINGFIELD, March 4.—Outside of the burial of Mrs. Graham there are no new points in the tragedy to note to-day.

MRS. MOLLOY AND CORA LEE.

George Graham has brought before the people in a new role Mrs. Emma Molloy, the red ribbon temperance lecturer, and her friend, Cora Lee. Colonel Wells, of Grand Rapids, has known these two ladies for years and gives the following sketch of them to the Democrat: "Mrs. Molloy was the wife of Edward Molloy, formerly editor of a democratic paper at South Bend, Ind., and now editor of a paper at LaPorte. She was assistant editor and became interested in temperance and took to the rostrum as a red ribbon lecturer. She traveled all over this country and addressed large audiences in Europe. Three years ago she went to Indian Territory and recently removed to Missouri. Cora Lee was in her employ as a nurse and companion. She was raised in LaPorte and is twenty-three years old, was the daughter of a poor widow lady. Her mother married again and she was thrown on a cold, uncharitable world. She accompanied Mrs. Molloy to the Indian Territory and has been with her ever since. She is quite prepossessing in appearance, rather tall, fine form, gray eyes, heavy dark eye lashes, fair complexion and pleasant face. She had a most excellent disposition, confiding, perhaps too much with those inclined to be friendly toward her. Graham was Mrs. Molloy's advance agent while she continued in the lecture field, and married Cora Lee last fall. Cora knew nothing of his first wife, who was then living, until she saw in a Saint Louis paper, in December, that a wife and son of Graham were missed by their friends in the east. The boy, who is twelve years old, wrote his aunt that she need not write any more letters to his mother, because his father had sent her so far away from home that she would never be heard from again."

A letter was presented to George Graham, yesterday, by Mrs. Molloy, but was not given out for publication until last evening. It is generally regarded here as an ingeniously worded appeal for quarter. Graham has given it no attention and is still busily engaged in fixing dates and coupling facts for his coming historical statement, which will be one of the most lengthy and interesting chapters ever given to the public. The following is the letter.

SPRINGFIELD, Mo., March 2, 1886.

My Poor Boy:

This is probably the very last letter I shall ever be permitted to pen you. I am committed with Cora, as an accessory to that terrible murder, of which you know I am as innocent as a child unborn. In all the flood of misrepresentation and malice that has been so unjustly heaped upon me, I have not yet opened my mouth in my own defense, because the excitement over Sarah's murder is so intense that I have feared mob violence, not only for you, but for Cora and myself. Reason and judgment will yet prevail. We are not to be tried by the newspapers, but by the courts, and I expect to be tried by that higher tribunal, the judgement bar of God. All that you can say will not alter God's verdict when we are all put in His scales and stand before Him in the judgment. I do not write this to deter you from saying anything that, before God, you think you ought to say, for the good of the world or the cause of Christ, but be careful that in your hot haste to avenge a supposed wrong, you do not do as grave and terrible wrong to me as you did to poor Sarah, and then wish through all eternity you had done full justice by one who has never shown you a solitary injustice or willfully done you a wrong. You have never had any thing but kindness from me, from the first hour that you came to me, a poor, sorrowful outcast; and in the tenderness of the religion (in which no one knows better than you I am sincere, and have lived out in all my associations with you). I cared for you as my own, you know how unselfishly. Now, all the newspapers are trying, by sensational reports, to confirm the charge that I helped to plan the murder, and am equally guilty with you. People who seem to care more for sensation than for an innocent human life, are imposing upon you and deceiving you by falsehoods about my utterance and about Judge Baker, and trying to close your mouth by mob violence. I think this chapter of horrors would be complete were you to be hung in the same town where I am. I have for this reason refused to speak a word in my own defense thus far, and Judge Baker only wants to see justice done, and the right vindicated and is emphatically opposed to mob violence. No one on our side has any desire to persecute you, terribly as we have suffered in the attempt to be kind to you. You, in your hot haste, did a wrong to poor Sarah that you can never undo and have put yourself in a position where you may tear down those who are innocent, but you can never build them up. Without the least cause, you may, perhaps, impair the whole work of my life by unguarded and hasty utterances, that can never be recalled. Is this a just reward for the unselfish devotion of years? By our words we shall be justified, by our words we shall be condemned. Remember, in these days you are speaking for eternity. I am simply holding still in God's hands. He will do right by me and I have commended myself to Him. With every prayer for God's help for myself, I have still to cry, "God have mercy upon George," and I pray that He will give you true repentance. If in the fury of this gale I go down, I have commended myself and the dear helpless children under my care, to God. I have only tried to do what good I could, in the last few years, and if God deems my life work done and it can be possible that I shall stand charged with the grave crime of helping to murder the mother of your innocent babies and the law cannot protect me, I shall say "God's will be done." Don't say anything that you will not be willing to meet at the bar of God, for this life is but a small portion of the life eternal. No one pities you more than the one who has prayed as earnestly for you as any one on earth and now I can only commend you to God's mercy. We shall meet at God's bar. He will do us all full justice.

Yours, in fear of God,

[Signed] EMMA MOLLOY.

Graham's statement will not be forthcoming until the preliminary trial of Mrs. Molloy and Cora Lee.

OUR MAJOR GENERALS.

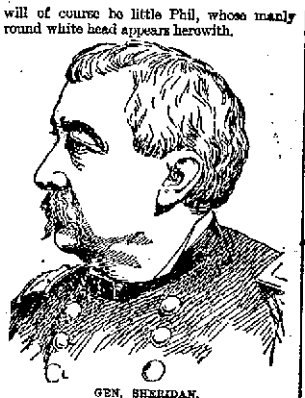
[Special Correspondence.]

CHICAGO, March 3, 1886.—The attention of newspaper reader has been called anew to the generals of our army, since the death of Gen. Hancock. There is a common impression that Phil Sheridan was promoted to the place from which Gen. Sherman retired in 1883, by reason of having reached the age of 62. This is the age at which commissioned officers are to be gently relegated by law to private life.

But Sheridan did not take Sherman's place. He is the last, so to speak, of our little army, but his title is that of lieutenant general, and his pay is $11,000 a year. Sherman was the general of the army, with a pay of $13,500 a year. This title and place were created after the last war. It was really done to provide for Gen. Grant. Gen. Grant's country was always providing for him. He at least could not say that republics were ungrateful. Grant was general of the army till his inauguration as president in 1869. Then the office and title devolved on his friend "Cump." Sherman, who some how never had the knack of getting on with the newspapers.

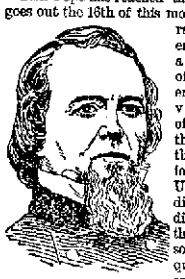
The general's title has lapsed for the present. If anybody gets it anyways soon, it will of course be little Phil, whose manly round white head appears herewith.



GEN. SHERIDAN.

The military question is now who is going to be major general in Hancock's place. The law limits the major generals to three. Their salary is $7,500. Gen. Hancock was so hospitable that he could not live on this pay, and died poor. Since his death there remain of the major generals two, John M. Schofield and John Pope.

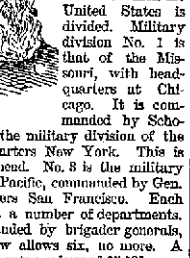
Gen. Pope has reached the age of 62, and goes out the 16th of this month, to live on his retired major general's pay of $5,625 a year. Thus two of the major generals' places are vacant. These officers are each at the head of one of the military divisions into which the United States is divided. Military division No. 1 is that of the Missouri, with headquarters at Chicago. It is commanded by Schofield. No. 2 is the military division of the Atlantic, headquarters New York. This is now without a head. No. 3 is the military division of the Pacific, commanded by Gen. Pope, headquarters San Francisco. Each division includes a number of departments. These are commanded by brigader generals, of which the law allows six, no more. A brigadier general gets a salary of $5,500.



GEN. POPE.

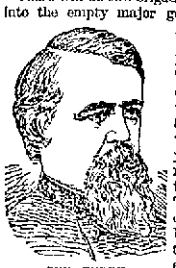
Gen. John Pope graduated at West Point, in 1842. The brainiest men of the West Point students are promoted to the engineer corps. Pope was one of the fortunate. He began his military career as second lieutenant of topographical engineers. He was in the Mexican war, and has seen much solid fighting. Some of his countrymen have a fancy that he is a better engineer than general, but that is neither here nor there.

Practically, therefore, Schofield is the only major-general in the field. His command is the most important in the country, comprising a slice down the middle of it, which takes in about two-thirds. He can go to New York city if he likes, being the senior major general. But he would go from a large department to a small and less important one, simply for the sake of being in New York. John McAllister Schofield was born in New York state, in 1831. He was born the same year Sheridan was, and graduated in the same class at West Point. He was for a while a schoolmaster, though he does not look it. He was professor of physics at West Point, and afterward at Washington university, St. Louis. He got his boom toward distinction at the battle of Franklin, Tenn., in the late war. He was president, or whatever the proper military title corresponding to it is, at West Point for a time.



GEN. SCHOFIELD.

There will be two brigadier generals to step into the empty major general's shoes this month. They will be Gens. Terry and Howard. Gen. Terry is a brother of Rose Terry, the writer. He is now 58 years old, and will only have four years to enjoy his major general's triple stars. Gen. Terry was educated at the Yale Law school, and is the only one of the subjects of this sketch who is not a West Pointer. He is the man who captured Fort Fisher, in 1865. He is in Dakota.



GEN. TERRY.

Brig. Gen. Oliver Otis Howard is at present out in the department of the Platte. He was born in 1830, and graduated at West Point in 1854. He was afterward assistant professor of mathematics there. You would know he was a mathematician by his head. He lost an arm at Fair Oaks in the late war, and commanded the Second corps at Gettysburg. After the war he was detailed to serve as commissioner of the Freedmen's bureau, at Washington. In this connection his name has been mentioned in an unpleasant way, on account of the collapse of the Freedmen's bank, and a rank injustice thereby was done him.

The Dry Dock Line the Scene of a Riot that the Police Could Not Stop.

The Situation at Springfield and News of Labor Troubles Elsewhere.

THE OLD STORY.

The War of Wage Workers Continues.

By Telegraph to THE SENTINEL.

NEW YORK, March 4.—When the dry dock line tried to run a car to-day with the aid of the police, the strikers put a car of the Forty-second street line across the track, dumped a load of coal on the track, ran another car in that and captured all the wagons passing, took the horses away and left the wagons as obstructions.

The police were utterly helpless, and gangs of men continued piling wagons and cars across the track. They upset some cars and wagons, took the wheels off others, dumped coal, and used every means within reach to prevent the use of the track.

BROOKLYN, N. Y., March 4.—Not a car is running on any of the seven roads controlled by the Atlantic avenue railroad company to-day. The strikers are orderly.

SPRINGFIELD, March 4.—The situation to-day is unchanged and the report, current last night, that all Knights of Labor and their sympathizers employed in the knife and car works and the new champion shops were to be discharged, proves a mistake. The managers of those works say they have no intention of taking any such action.

BALTIMORE, Md., March 4.—Several hundred men employed in grading for a short line railroad between Baltimore and Annapolis, have quit work and yesterday three Italians and two negroes made an assault upon some at work. They were arrested.

ST. LOUIS, March 4.—The wire mill on Twenty-first and Papin streets was last night the scene of a conflict between the strikers and non-strikers, that resulted in the injury of two men, and in the arrest of four strikers who attacked workers on their way home.

A BRAVE GIRL.

She Takes Her Father's Place as Sheriff.

By Telegraph to THE SENTINEL.

DETROIT, Mich., March 4.—Hattie McKay, the eighteen year old daughter of Sheriff McKay, of Tuscola county, was at the Michigan Central depot yesterday on her way to the Jackson prison, having in custody Samuel Woodman, who was sentenced for one year for assaulting his wife with a carving knife. The sheriff is very sick and Hattie has taken upon herself and done so much of his business she decided to take the prisoner. She said she did not handcuff him, but had a revolver in her pocket and kept him in sight all the time.

Dalton Must Yield.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, March 4.—The supreme, this morning, affirmed the decision of the lower court in refusing to grant a writ of habeas corpus in the case of Daniel J. Dalton, of Cincinnati, held for contempt of the house of representatives.

In one of his letters to his sister, just published, Benjamin Disraeli wrote, anent a party at Balwer's: "I was introduced, 'by particular desire,' to Mrs. Wyndham Lewis, a pretty little woman, a flirt and a rattle; indeed, gifted with a volubility I should think unequaled, and of which I can convey no idea. She told me that she 'liked silent, melancholy men.' I answered 'that I had no doubt of it!'" And yet, in a few years, Mrs. Lewis and Mr. Disraeli "were married and lived happily ever after," as the story-books say.

"Never despair" is the motto adopted by thousands who have been relieved of their pains by St. Jacobs Oil.

Rev. T. De Witt Talmage will lecture at Indianapolis the evening of the 17th inst.

The Galveston Times has been removed to Logansport, where it will hereafter be published.

The commissioners of Cass county ordered an election in April to determine whether the county shall purchase the gravel roads in the county and make them free.

The grain buyers of Logansport have entered into a combination on prices and pay from five to eight cents less per bushel for grain than dealers in the surrounding small towns. Logansport offers an excellent field for a grain dealer who has the pluck and capital to fight a combination.

A company has been organized in Logansport to sink a well for the purpose of determining whether natural gas is to be found in that region. There have been indications to the presence of the article, and enough stock has been subscribed to sink a well 1,000 feet, and if necessary, 2,000 feet.

A petition is being circulated in Wabash and Miami counties for the pardon of Ezra Roberts, who was sent, one year ago, to the northern prison for stealing cattle in Miami county. An argument will be made soon before the governor by Hon. H. H. Shiveley, of Wabash, for the release of Roberts.

Just two months ago John Dickell was killed by the cars at the Lake Shore depot in Elkhart. His son William, came on from Pennsylvania to attend the funeral. After the obsequies he went to work for the same company. He was run over yesterday at Waterloo while turning a switch, and instantly killed.

The following city ticket has been put in the field by the republicans of Wabash: Mayor, Clarence W. Stephenson; clerk, Howe McGuire; treasurer, Ben Kendall; marshal, Hall Ellis; assessor, John Cochrane. Councilmen—First ward, John H. Dicken; Second ward, Thomas W. McClure; Third ward, Andrew J. Ross.

The chief of police at Lafayette ordered the closing of their largest rink on account of the many crimes said to be traceable to it. A sixteen-year old daughter of respectable parents was found, after being missed a week, in a room on Main street, where she had been decoyed from the rink by six young men. She owes her downfall to attendance at this place of amusement.

The working year with the contractors at the prison north begins March 1, when a number of changes are usually made in the free working force and other matters. But few changes were made this year in the working force, and but a small difference in contract work was reported. In several of the shops an increase in the task of the men was made, which, as usual, met with some opposition from the convicts.

The supreme court yesterday decided another of the telephone cases, affirming the decision of the Marion county criminal court in convicting Superintendent Hockett for charging Wm. K. Thompson the $5 rental for the use of a telephone. The case in all its features is practically the same as the Hunghey case, which was decided two weeks ago, and the decision which is given by Judge Niblack, is based upon the former opinion.

Grand Regent John N. Runyan, in his annual address to the delegates of the Grand Council Royal Arcanum, on the the state of the order, said: "At the close of last year we had twenty-six councils, with a total membership of 931. We now have twenty-nine councils with a total membership of 1,058, showing a gain of three councils and 127 members in the jurisdiction as the result of one year's work, except partially organized councils at Rochester, Columbia City, Auburn and other points where deputies are now at work, but not yet ready to institute."

M. LIEGEOLES, professor at the faculty of law at Nancy, an enthusiastic experimentist, has just invented what he calls Physpnatisme telephonique. He sends people to sleep several miles distant from him by transmitting to them by telephone the order to go to sleep; he then, by telephone, suggests to them the acts he wishes them to commit, and his orders are faithfully obeyed. One young man was told to fire a revolver and steal a 5 franc piece; on waking up he committed both offenses. A young girl who was sent to sleep by the telephonic order was told to sneeze twice on waking up and to sing a song; she did both.

A MOST remarkable case of restoration of eyesight is reported from Liverpool. Mr. Louis B. Goodman, of that city, for a period of two years has been absolutely blind. A large number of London specialists had, after examining the eyes, pronounced the case hopeless. Lately, however, Mr. Goodman was brought under the treatment of a Manchester oculist, and after eleven weeks' residence in the St. John's Royal Eye Hospital in that city has recovered sight. The doctors, on professional grounds, refuse to give any exact information as to the remedies adopted, but Mr. Goodman says that during the first few days he was in the hospital he was placed under the influence of chloroform, but of what then occurred he has only the faint knowledge of a large accumulation of matter having been removed from his head. After this the patient was put under general treatment, and from the first fortnight began to gradually regain his sight. After being in the hospital for five or six weeks, such strides had he made toward recovery, and so high were his spirits, that on being visited one day by a friend he was found amusing himself by jumping over the forms in the room. He remained in St. John's Hospital for eleven weeks, and left, having the sight in both eyes. He is now in the Convalescent Home in Southport, in almost complete possession of both eyes, having abandoned spectacles.

The combination, proportion, and process in preparing Hood's Sarsaparilla, are peculiar to this medicine, and unknown to others.

SOME $70,000,000 are invested in the electric light industry in America.

THE Indianapolis News, (republican) says the republican senators will find it difficult to overcome President Cleveland's logical message on the contest over confirmations.

POPE LEO is seventy-five years of age and yesterday celebrated the eighth anniversary of his elevation to the papacy. He is displeased with the restrictions of the Italian government on himself.

SECRETARY WHITNEY has sent a letter to the chairman of the senate committee of the New York legislature investigating the Broadway street railroad case, in which he explains his connection with the matter, and says if he is in any respect open to just criticism he is not aware of it. There was some gossip reflecting on Mr. Whitney, hence this explanation.

NOVA SCOTIA is the only place under the British flag where imprisonment for debt is allowed and practiced. In any other of the Canadian provinces a creditor can sue a debtor that resides in Nova Scotia, but a Nova Scotian creditor can not return the compliment. The manifest unjustness of this law receives occasional spasmodic agitation, but the objectionable law still exists.

JUSTICE FIELD tells how his pride had a fall. When he was a young man he was particularly proud of his erect form and fine, curling hair. Walking one day with head well up he ran against a cart and injured his knee. The injury resulted in permanent lameness and a consequent stoop in his shoulders. Afterward hard study produced brain fever, and a fly blister cured the fever and destroyed his waving locks.

MR. BONNER'S Maud S., as an admirer tells, stands in her box as modestly as if she was not the wonder of the world. Her disposition, too, unlike most fast horses, is perfect. Gentle and playful as a kitten, and as affectionate as a dog, she is beloved of more men than any woman in the world. When her glossy neck is stroked she rubs her pretty face against your sleeve and acknowledges the attention with gratitude.

MR. BUCK, the Kentuckian sent as Minister to Peru, has stirred the fashionable circle of Lima to its center by appearing at a state official dinner in a business suit. The dinner was given in his honor, and he was the only one who did not appear in evening dress. Mr. Buck honestly states in his own defense that he had not in his wardrobe such a thing as a swallow-tail, so some of the Americans have formed a syndicate to supply him with an evening dress suit. The Right Hon. W. E. Forster, of England, committed a similar gaucherie at a dinner in his honor given at the Union League Club, New York.

MR. HENRY M. STANLEY, the African explorer, relates that when he started on his tour through the "Dark Continent," he took in his baggage a large collection of books. But as the number of his men was lessened, the books had one by one to be left by the wayside, until finally, when less than 300 miles from the Atlantic, he had left only the Bible, Shakespeare, Carlyle's "Sarter Resartus," Norie's Navigation, and the Nautical Almanac. At Zinga the Shakespeare was abandoned, and afterward Norie, the Almanac, and last, "Sarter Resartus" were thrown down, only the Bible going through to the end.

PREMIER GLADSTONE has at last made a definite statement concerning the policy which he would like to pursue with regard to Ireland. The proposition which he puts forward may be briefly stated as follows: He would empower the landlords to sell lands to the tenants on a twelve years' valuation, the state advancing money to the tenants to pay for the land, and the local authorities of the counties being held responsible for the repayment to the state of the sums thus advanced, the payments to be effected by a series of yearly installments. He would also establish a parliament at Dublin, with power to control all the internal affairs of Ireland, including the police. These conclusions are not final, but merely "feelers," the dispatches add.

CUTHBERT BULLITT JONES, of Louisiana, who, a few weeks ago, so roundly denounced Representative J. Floyd King, of the Pelican State, seems bent on having somebody's blood, is now turning his attention to Senator Gibson. Jones accuses Gibson with having conspired with King to defeat him (Jones) in his efforts to get an appointment, and that, since King has been shown up in such bad light, he is trying to unload him. When the Jones-King quarrel was pending last November a Washington correspondent wrote as follows of Jones:

"The life of Cuthbert Jones reads like a romance. His father was a rich Kentuckian, who went to Louisiana early in life, and there married more riches in the person of one of the wealthiest and most beautiful daughters of that State. He engaged in planting, and before the war broke out he owned hundreds of slaves and thousands of acres of rich cotton lands. He became one of the grandees of the State, and was widely known as a high-toned gentleman. Near him, however, there lived another wealthy planter named Liddell, who was also rich, and who for years was Mr. Jones' close friend. Mr. Liddell married a well-educated Yankee girl who had gone South to teach as a governess. Time went on, and both Jones and Liddell began families. Then a jealousy sprung up in some way between the ladies of the families, and, as a well-posted Louisianian tells me, one day when Mr. Cuthbert Jones' father went to call upon his friend, Gen. Liddell, he was met at the gate by one of Liddell's daughters, and struck across the face with a ridingwhip. The girl then shot at him with a little pocket-pistol, but failed to seriously hurt him. Out of this striking sprung the Jones-Liddell vendetta, which has existed for years between the two families, which has caused more than twenty-five deaths, and which has about wiped out the masculine portion of both families. The two fathers both died by the bullet long ago. The young man who now wants General King's blood was riding down the Mississippi in a steamboat with his father, when the boat stopped at General Liddell's plantation. General Liddell came on board, and was killed by his enemy, Mr. Jones. The boy, however, had nothing to do with this shooting, though he was with his father at the time. He was only fifteen years old, and had not killed a Liddell. Shortly after this killing on the steamboat a party of the Liddell family came to the Jones house and surprised them. They shot the old man, and his boy escaped by hanging outside of a third story window with his hands to the sill. His enemies searched the house for him, but did not notice his fingers, and after they were gone he climbed in, and a few days after fled the country to escape them. He went to Europe and spent his school days in Heidelberg. He was finely educated there, and he now speaks six languages as well as he does the English. He has never been back to Louisiana, and he has for some time been living in Washington. The trouble with 'General' King grows out of a scurrilous remark which King uttered about Mr. Jones' mother, which King afterward denied but failed to substantiate the denial."

PURIFY YOUR BLOOD.

DR. A. C. HOXSIE'S CERTAIN CROUP CURE.—This preparation, a private and original prescription, was extensively used in an unlimited practice for many years, with perfect success by the late A. C. Hoxsie, M. D., of Buffalo, N. Y. Having thoroughly tested and tried this remedy, he had no hesitation in pronouncing it positive, swift and sure to cure Croup in its most aggravated form, when administered promptly and according to directions. Its powerful and direct effect upon the diseased mucous membrane, render it particularly invaluable to those living at a distance from a physician—as it is seldom necessary to call in professional aid. If this "Certain Croup Cure" is near at hand. While powerful and effectual, it contains no opium in any form, nor any drug which can have a deleterious or injurious effect upon the system. The most delicate infant may take it, as directed, with perfect safety. Price $1.00. For sale by all first-class druggists, wholesale and retail. dec22-eodawlm

HORSEFLESH AS FOOD.

We have not come to it in this country, but in France old horses are fattened and killed for their meat, just as we kill and eat cows and sheep that are growing past the profitable age. One good result of this is that horses, as soon as they are past their prime, become objects of petting and careful feeding, instead of being sent adrift to starve to death or fall into brutal hands.

Reformers and Corsets.

From the Baltimore American, Sept. 20, 1885.

The dress reformers and those who advocate the abolition of the corsets as an article of women's apparel will be dismayed at the enormous increase in the manufacture and sale of corsets. There are now no less than ten or twelve large establishments in the United States devoted exclusively to the manufacture of corsets of the better quality. Their capital aggregates millions of money, and of the manufacturers of the cheaper grade of goods there is seemingly no end. The Thomson Glove-Fitting corset, manufactured by Thomson, Langdon & Co., of New York, which is sold by all first-class dealers in the United States, is gaining in popular favor each season, and at the present time the orders are far in advance of the supply. Whether or not corsets are injurious to health will continue to be a vexed question with theorists until the Goddess of Fashion decrees their abolition. Meanwhile, any article which adds to the beauty and comfort of the female form will continue in favor until the goddess is dethroned. Messrs. Thomson, Langdon & Co., recognize this fact, and they make more than thirteen different styles of Thomson's Glove Fitting, two of which are with extra long waists, in order that every demand of comfort and beauty may be met. Competent judges have pronounced them superior to all others, and they have obtained the highest awards at all the world's great fairs and expibitions. The latest honor is the First Degree of Merit at the New Orleans Exposition. 1t

Distress After Eating,

the result of indigestion, will no longer be experienced if a half tablespoonful of Simmons Liver Regulator is taken after each meal. It is such a good digester, and so mild and pleasant in its effects, that it is used by many after a hearty meal to ensure good digestion. The Regulator does not nauseate or irritate the stomach, is purely vegetable, and can be taken in any condition of the system, and, unlike any other known medicine, when it's use is discontinued, the system is not left constipated.

WOMEN.

A Budget of Interesting Gossip Relating to the Tender Sex.

SILENCE CAPTURED THE CAKE.

Julian Hawthorne on Woman's Rights—A Kentucky Belle on Love-Making—Popping the Question.

Silence Takes the Cake.

There were three maidens who loved a King;
They sat together beside the sea.
One cried: "I love him, and I would die
If but for a day he might love me."

The second whispered: "And I would die
To gladden his heart or make him groan."
The third one spoke not, but gazed afar
With dreamy eyes that were sad as fate.

The King he loved the first for a day.
The second his life with fond love blessed;
And yet the woman who never spoke
Was the one of the three who loved him best.

She Knew It!

"Doctor! I'm worried about my husband! Do you think him seriously ill?"

"To the best of my judgment, madam, he is suffering from gastritis."

"I knew it. I told him his trouble was from fooling with that gas meter yesterday."—Yonkers Gazette.

Rather Rarely.

She: "This is a pretty hour of the night for you to come home after promising me to be home at a quarter of twelve. You are the biggest liar in Austin."

He: (Pointing to the clock.) "Well, ain't three a quarter of twelve? It ain't my fault that you don't know arithmetic."—Texas Siftings.

Not Much of a Kicker.

"I understand the old man doesn't want you to come to see his daughter," said one young fellow to another.

"That's the state of the case, but I went all the same."

"No!"

"Yes. Was there last night."

"Did he kick?"

"Some."

"Much?"

"Well, no, not a great deal," was the hesitating reply; "that is, not as much as he might have done. He only kicked me from the parlor to the front door, and I went the balance of the way by myself." Exchange.

Julian Hawthorne on Woman's Rights.

In his latest novel Julian Hawthorne has this paragraph: "Could that dreary slavery called Woman's Rights ever be put into operation the world would soon become too business-like to think of love and marriage. Woman is the conservative of the human race; she is the centripetal, as man is the centrifugal force. If she did not stay at home and mind her own affairs, home would cease to exist. Man, in that case, would do well to exterminate the female half of creation off the earth, as merely a feebler and frailer imitation of himself, and then die with the consoling consciousness of having done one good deed. Nothing is more certain, however, than that women are not and never will be such fools as some few of themselves, and quite as many forlorn nondescripts of our own sex, would like to persuade them that they are."

Popping the Question.

A lady correspondent gives the following instructive hints on the all-important subject of popping the question: "Never propose to a girl who has been out driving the day or evening before with another man. Women have not the versatility of men and cannot as readily turn from one subject to another. Never propose to a woman who has recently rejected some one else. Woman is naturally sympathetic, and in refusing proffered love she instinctively, almost unconsciously, devotes herself to a life of celibacy. She should be carefully watched until the reaction takes place, and then she becomes even better prepared than before to lend attention to a declaration. If she has been engaged and the relation has been dissolved, the lover may even be a little careless in the selection of his time. To a girl once engaged an engagement becomes a necessity, and she is prepared at almost any moment to listen favorably to an advantageous proposition. To propose to a girl in her own home in the afternoon is madness, and if the excursion fails the inevitable deduction is that for such a girl the evening is the only time that promises any possibility of success. It is a work of supererogation to dwell on evening declarations. Every man understands them, and he has only to make the most cursory examination as to the health of the subject before entrusting his ambition to words.—Exchange.

A Kentucky Belle on Love-Making.

In the classic language of Mr. George W. Simpson, from the interior of Kentucky, the man had "been thar" who "writ" these lines:

"Tis sweet to love, but oh, how bitter,
To love a gal and then not git her.

As the poet touchingly insinuates, says the Louisville Commercial, the sensation of being thoroughly in love is the sweetest emotion that moves the human breast. Love rules the nation. Love is the joy of all creation. But love unrequited has the sting of a million deaths. Love leads to death, to misery, to crime, and to suicide. Nearly every weak-minded man who loves and don't "git her" becomes a self-assassin. Men of stronger mind, suffer for a while, and then, as a rule, look for another girl and make the best of experience.

But the glamour is gone and the sentiment is no longer the main-spring. Method takes its place, for he who loves the second time loves with a system. It is the first love that moves to ecstatic bliss or reduces life to a stainless blank, as the girl always puts it when she writes by her window at midnight with the moonbeams streaming in to remind her of a blissful love stroll in the June time long ago. But according to the professed belief of a noted belle of this city who is now a round and rosy matron with children at her knee, the poet's dreadful contingent need never bring misery to a lover's heart. In other words the man who loves in the right way can "get her."

"A score of men made love to me," said the excellent lady above referred to, "and any one of them might have had me if he had studied the art of love-making with the same care he would give any time to a game of chess.

"I hold that love-making is an art. There is no such thing as love at first sight. We may admire each other in the beginning, but immediate affection is out of the question. First impressions, no matter how favorable, must be strengthened by artful cultivation. Then love comes, and if the man who sues makes no mistake, he is sure to win, no matter what his conditions may be. Of course he must talk well, dress respectably, and, above all, wear clean linen and keep his face free from dirt. If he does all this and sues judiciously no arrow of misfortune can keep the victor's wreath from off his crown. I might add that one of the requisites in personal appearance is clean teeth. A man may have a nose like a pumpkin, or a mouth like a mammoth ham, or a foot as big as a canoe, he can win, but if his teeth are not what a gentleman's teeth ought to be he will rue the day he gave his heart to a well-bred woman. He may be tall or short, stout or lean, with a voice like a fog-horn and a carriage as ungraceful as the amble of a camel, and he may yet win any woman in the world if he studies her with care and keeps his teeth clean.

"I heard a pretty girl from Cleveland say once that she had been devotedly sought by young Mr. L. for four years. She was fond of him and admired him for many excellent qualities, but she finally let him go, because, as she put it, he never had the courage to once squeeze her hand. To my knowledge there was never a purer or better girl than that one, but she was too full of mercury to ever wed a man who lacked the spirit to at least squeeze her hand in a loyable way. Real women, I protest, care nothing for milk-and-water men, nor do they always worship heroes, but, as I have said, if any intelligent man, with clean linen and clean teeth, will make a judicious combination of flattery and ardent devotion he can win any woman in the world who doesn't hate him for a cause in the beginning.

"Let me say just one more word about love-making. This is for girls. A noted French author in one of his books declares that jealous men are always fickle. It is just the other way. Jealous men are never fickle. Jealousy is the surest evidence of true love. When a woman can arouse the demon in a man's bosom, she may always feel sure of him. He loves her and will go on his knees when she bids him."

A LITTLE TALK WITH NED BUNTLINE.

"I was the earliest writer of serial stories in this country," said Col. Judson, better known as "Ned Buntline." "I wrote 'The King of the Seas,' 'The Queen of the Seas,' 'The Black Avenger,' and 'The Red Avenger' in the Boston Flag of the Union, the first serial story paper. In those days they thought $100 was fine pay for 400 pages of manuscript."

"And now?"

"Well, the New York Weekly pays $2,000 to $2,500 for each story, and they run one of mine all the time."

"I have written under many names," continued Col. Judson. "The best known is undoubtedly 'Ned Buntline.' I have written a great many under the name of 'Clow Garnot.' I have also used 'Miss Julia Edwards' a great deal. An army officer fell deeply in love with Julia Edwards, and wrote letters very much desiring my hand in marriage. I answered some of them for a time. He finally wrote that he was coming to Warrenton, Va., where I was staying at that time. I then had to write him telling him his mistake. I suppose he would willingly have killed me.

"I have a library in which I work, and no one comes near me there. I isolate myself from my family and apply myself heartily to my work. Under pressure I have produced 600 pages of foolscap manuscript in six days.

"The first bound work for which I was paid was a Sunday-school book."—Detroit Free Press.

THE main reason why the gifted are so apt to fall is that the devil seems to give their cases special attention.—Chicago Ledger.

A MAN may be full all the time, but his pocket-book will not catch the disease.

MRS. TOODLES OUTDONE.

In the village cemetery stands a monument of economy which we think has no counterpart in the country. It is a tombstone, the present owner of which purchased it of another who had erected a large monument, and of course the second-hand tombstone went cheap. Having made the singular purchase the present owner, who, by the way, is the female head of the family, proceeded to have the inscription altered so that it would do the duty she intended for it. As the result of her efforts the inscription now reads: "In the memory of C—— B——, wife of R—— B——. We are both here." The very unimportant part which the husband fills in his family, as indicated in this inscription, is only exceeded in its absurdity by the fact that both of the parties the tombstone informs the reader lie there under the sod are alive and promise to be so for many years to come. As an economic, or rather a parsimonious, transaction, this deal in a second-hand tombstone stands up head.—Catskill Mail.

Mr. J. A. Price, deputy inspector of State Tobacco warehouse No. 5, Baltimore, Md., says: One of my children had been suffering with neuralgia for some time. A friend recommended Salvation Oil. I procured a bottle and a few applications, to my surprise, effected a complete cure. I take pleasure in recommending it to all persons similarly affected.

L. S. Cumback, bookseller and stationer of Greencastle, has assigned to M. D. Bridges. Liabilities, $3,000; assets, nominal.

ADVICE TO MOTHERS.—Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup should always be used when children are cutting teeth. It relieves the little sufferers at once; it produces natural, quiet sleep by relieving the child from pain, and the little cherub awakes as "bright as a button." It is very pleasant to taste. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain relieves wind, regulates the bowels, and is the best known remedy for diarrhœa, whether arising from teething or other causes. Twenty-five cents a bottle.

Morss, then city editor of THE SENTINEL, asking him to get a pardon from the governor. The writer read that letter and agreed with Mr. Morss that it was a gem.

Never skip the advertisements when reading a newspaper. They show just what live business men are doing, and every one who has trading to do will find it pays to trade with those who advertise. Business men who do not advertise are not up to the spirit of the times, and their stock lingers on their hands. Those who advertise turn their stock quickly, make a fair profit, and always have a fresh stock to select from. This is a fact and not a fiction, as can be demonstrated by every successful business man in the country.

THE MARCH SKY.

The Heavenly Wonders of the Third Month.

There is promised us an annular eclipse of the sun to-morrow. In Fort Wayne, the eclipse will be noticed about sunset, if the sky is clear. Numerous requests come from young people to make the phenomena later in the eve, but the motives are selfish and THE SENTINEL astronomer cannot consent to a postponement. The sun is a little slow, it will go down about 6 o'clock, less a few moments. The sun is only 91,510,200 from us, and instruments can be fixed for that distance. The moon is now pretty close to Venus and Neptune and an eclipse may be arranged exclusively for spooney people.

"MICHAEL STROGOFF."

The Imperial Messenger of the Czar, Our Guest.

The dramatization of as clever a novel as Jules Verne's "Michael Strogoff," introducing, as it does, a diversity of scene, is not an easy task, but fortunately for the people of Fort Wayne, this novel fell into good hands, and a picturesque realization of it can be seen at the Temple to-night. D'Ennery, the great French play-right, succeeded in following the story closely, and in presenting the more striking of the situations with links enough between to give a clear idea of the story to those who have never read the novel. The motive of the play is in the earnest devotion to duty of Michael Strogoff, of the imperial messengers of the czar, who, given a message to Irkutsk, overcomes all obstacles to fulfill his pledge, "For God, the Czar and My Country." In the cast are such artists as Joseph Slayton, Clarence Wilkins, Edward Hassen, Cecile Rush, Heaton Monice, Florine Arnold, Charlotta Brianza, Eugene Cappalina and Eliza Carulio. Mr. Charles L. Andrews presents this picturesque drama with forty people, under a special license of J. H. Haverly and Samuel Coville.

CONGRESSMEN--COWHIDES.

A Scene From the Ladies' Reception Room in the Capitol.

[Special Correspondence.]

WASHINGTON, March 1.—The ladies' reception room in the Capitol is always full of interesting and often anxious faces. Women with claims, cares and hopes wait there, stifling their impatience and wearing the look of easy self-satisfaction, when their hearts are as heavy as mountains. They wait, and wait and wait, with a heroic assumption of patience, while the lordly congressman put them off with forged excuses, or bid the messenger who summons them carry back the word that they can't be found. Sometimes one sees the same faces in this room day after day. As the time goes on and they are still there, with no prospect of having their wants looked after, anxiety and disappointment write cruel lines on their faces. A sight of their repressed misery reminds one forcibly of the unhappiness of those who "wait on princes' favors." Forty ladies are often in this reception room at one time. Each one has an errand of vital importance to her. She can do nothing to hurry matters. She must simply wait, wait, wait! At the last she is probably disappointed. All her time and anxiety have been uselessly spent.

Now and then there is a lively scene in this reception room, and congressmen are sometimes charged with duplicity, and it may be with something worse. During the last session a well-dressed woman with a rather aggressive air appeared at the door of the house opposite this room and attempted to enter. Her face was flushed and her eyes blazed with determination. She was gently pulled back, and it was then discovered that she was carrying a cowhide whip in her hand. She said that a certain congressman had ill-used her, and she was bound to horse-whip him in the presence of the house. The threat of a policeman restrained her.

Since then some of the congressmen cast uneasy glances at the babiliments of their female callers, looking for the concealed cowhide. They feel a little insecure in their minds, anyway, and since the irate woman's call they have picked up somewhat in gallantry. All congressmen have a wholesome fear of the cowhide. It is their natural enemy, far more to be dreaded than the ready revolver. It may be that the cowhide will become the established weapon of defense for women. Thus far its operations seem to have been followed by better results than that time-honored instrument of vengeance, the law. MAX ELTON.
